Before touching on these, let us refresh the reader's memory by a summary of results already recorded.

Beautiful perfumes are produced from substances not merely trivial, but in some cases fetid and repulsive. Fasel oil, putrid cheese, gas tar, and the drainage of cowhouses are thus transformed. The result is a triumph of year's almanac. Even in this list are given the names of such petty monarchs as the Duke of Saxe-Meiningen, but must mention Minns, love; Stel-

Mary, albeit some etymologists translate it marah (bitter), is one of the sweetest as well as the commonest ever given to woman. I prefer to consider it as signifying exalted, or, as another authority has it, star of the sea. Maria and Marie (the latter being French) are merely other forms of the same mame, and, of course, have the same meaning.

Martha means billerness, which, alas!

M. Defort next took up the matter, and Lord Dover, who translated in shook, expressed an opinion that he had absolutely proved the identity of Mathioli with the masked prisoner. About a year M.
